Focus

The Record of Libyan-Sponsored Assassination Attempts, 1980-85

Since 1980, the Libyan Government has engaged directly in more than 30 assassination attempts outside its borders (see chronology), and the list continues to grow. Although the Qadhafi regime has been arming and training numerous insurgent and dissident groups as far back as the early 1970s, Libya did not become an actual practitioner of terrorism until late 1979, when Qadhafi began his drive to eliminate dissidents permanently. Qadhafi's fear that the increasingly active Libyan exile movement challenges his claim to be the sole representative of the Libyan people has provided the principal motivation.

Apart from Libyan dissidents, Qadhafi's second major target for terrorism has been selected moderate leaders in Africa and the Middle East. The persistent objects of his unremitting hatred are the leaders of Egypt, Sudan, and Chad. Yasir Arafat, a former ally, and Jordan's King Hussein are also prime enemies as Qadhafi perceives them as traitors to the united Arab front against Israel and its patron, the United States. Qadhafi's hostility extends as well to Saddam Husayn of Iraq. However, Libya has yet to implement a direct attack on any of these leaders except Habre of Chad.

b3 [redacted] continues to document numerous plots by Qadhafi against these pro-Western leaders, but continuing Libyan ineptitude as well as efficient security measures have thus far been heavily responsible for preventing the plots from becoming actual attempts. Barring good luck or unusual lapses in security, these Libyan plots are no more likely to succeed in the future, despite the pressure from the increasingly influential radical element in Qadhafi's inner circle.

US diplomats have occasionally been the object of Libyan assassination plans, but again, no attacks have occurred. After the United States shot down two Libyan planes during an exercise in the Gulf of Sidra in 1981, for example, several incipient Libyan assassination plots against US diplomats in Western Europe were uncovered. Qadhafi, however, is a pragmatic political calculator who quickly backed down when informed that the United States was aware of his plans. We believe Qadhafi fears US retaliation and consequently has focused his attention on non-US targets that appear to be more vulnerable. This helps explain, in part, why he has thus far avoided directly targeting the United States or leaders like Jordan's King Hussein.

Chronology of Libyan-Sponsored Assassination Attempts, 1980-85

1985

6 April

West Germany: Anti-Qadhafi Libyan student killed in Bonn by Libyan gunman who was arrested. The assassin also wounded two German passersby, one seriously. The victim had been a target of the Libyan regime for at least two years.

2 April

Cyprus: Libyan businessman assassinated in downtown Nicosia by an unidentified gunman. The victim was the director of an offshore holding company and was believed to be an opponent of the Libyan regime.

1 March

Italy: Libyan jeweler murdered in his shop in Rome. A silencer-equipped pistol was left at the scene by the assassin.

28 February

Austria: Former Libyan Ambassador to Austria severely wounded by two shots fired from a car outside his home in Vienna. The victim had been a member of the original group of young officers who helped Qadhafi seize power in 1969. He quit his post in disgust at the regime in 1980.

February

Chad: Complaint lodged with United Nations, alleging Libya tried to assassinate President Hissein Habre in September 1984. Chad provided photographs of the suitcase bomb that was to be used in the attack.

17 November

Egypt: President Mubarak announces that four assassins sent to Egypt by Libya to kill former Libyan Prime Minister al-Bakkush had been arrested and forced to send fake pictures to the Libyan Embassy in Malta showing Bakkush apparently dead. The official Libyan press had fallen for the ploy and claimed Bakkush had been executed by suicide squads sent abroad "to liquidate enemies of the revolution."

21 September

Italy: Libyan exile found gagged and strangled in a hotel in Rome. The victim had been the subject of Libyan deportation requests.

20 August

United Kingdom: One of six Libyans awaiting trial for bomb attacks in London in March 1983 found shot to death in a London apartment. The victim may have been silenced by the Libyan Government.

~~Secret~~

4 July Greece: Two Libyan students found murdered in their apartment in a crime reminiscent of Libyan killings of anti-Qadhafi students in 1980 and 1981. The two were gagged, beaten, and strangled before being shot twice in the back.

21 June Greece: Anti-Qadhafi Libyan businessman killed by two men on a motorbike who avoided arrest. Libya's Foreign Minister concluded a visit to Greece the same day.

13 June Greece: A Libyan-born Greek citizen known to have distributed anti-Qadhafi literature at his store was wounded by a Libyan employee of Libyan Arab Airlines.

17 May Libya: JANA, the official Libyan news agency, announced "the Libyan masses have decided to form suicide commandos to chase traitors and stray dogs wherever they are and liquidate them physically."

17 April United Kingdom: British policewoman killed and 11 anti-Qadhafi demonstrators wounded by gunfire from Libyan People's Bureau in London. After a siege, British authorities found weapons and spent shell casings in the vacated embassy.

February Libya: Following the annual Libyan General People's Congress, the Libyan Revolutionary Committees announce that all Libyan exiles must return to Libya or face "the death penalty."

1983

2 September Italy: Four Libyans claiming to be seamen arrested in Rome while following the US Ambassador's motorcade.

19 February Libya: Libyan General People's Congress warns all Libyans in exile to return home or face "the anger of the Libyan people."

1982 No attempts known.

1981

20 October Sudan: Planned assassination of visiting Chadian President Hissein Habre failed when those sent to conduct the operation surrendered.

-24 February Italy: Several Libyan gunmen open fire on passengers arriving at Rome airport from Algiers. The head of the major anti-Qadhafi exile group was the target, [REDACTED] b3

29 November

United Kingdom: Anti-Qadhafi Libyan student murdered in London by three Libyans who left the country the next day.

14 November

[REDACTED]

b1, b3

11 November

United Kingdom: Two children of an anti-Qadhafi Libyan poisoned by eating peanuts containing thalium. British authorities arrested a Libyan for attempted murder of the children's father.

October

United States: Anti-Qadhafi student shot in Fort Collins, Colorado; the victim lost his right eye in the assault. The Libyan-hired assailant, an ex-Green Beret and US citizen, was arrested and jailed. The incident is the only known case of a Libyan operation successfully carried out inside the United States.

11 June

Italy: Anti-Qadhafi exile wounded by fellow Libyan in Rome after an argument. [REDACTED] The incident was part of Qadhafi's campaign to intimidate his political opponents abroad.

b1 b3

Italy: Libyan exile killed in Milan train station by an unidentified gunman, a few hours after expiration of a deadline set by Qadhafi for all Libyan exiles to return home.

21 May

Italy: Libyan exile shot at in Rome. The arrested Libyan gunman said he was sent by Libya "to kill an enemy of the people." Two accomplices escaped.

Greece: A Libyan exile and vocal opponent of the Libyan regime was killed in Athens. His throat was cut in his apartment.

20 May

Italy: Libyan businessman found stabbed and strangled to death in a boarding house in Rome.

10 May

West Germany: Libyan exile gunned down in Bonn. [REDACTED] murder was part of Qadhafi's assassination campaign.

b3

Italy: Libyan exile killed in Rome by one of two Libyans with whom he had been chatting in a hotel cafe.

Middle East

Hizballah Revenge Threat to US Interests

US interests in the Middle East face a new, serious threat of terrorist attack following press allegations of US complicity in an 8 March car bombing in South Beirut. The bomb killed some 80 Lebanese civilians and wounded scores of others, but the apparent target, prominent Hizballah cleric Muhammad Husayn Fadlallah, escaped injury.

So far, Fadlallah has responded in a low-key fashion to the story that the United States was involved with the group that tried to kill him. He reportedly said that his group has known all along of the roles of the United States, the Lebanese Phalangists, and Israel in the attack and added: "We consider the battle between the people and the US administration to be open ended."

Nevertheless, these allegations provide Hizballah—which has carried out several terrorist attacks against US interests under the covername of Islamic Jihad—with a new motive for launching further attacks on US facilities, particularly in Lebanon. It is important to note that previous Hizballah attacks have not been clearly linked to specific US actions or significant events. We believe Hizballah will attack any vulnerable US target whenever possible. The recent allegations, however, could prompt Hizballah operatives to accelerate the implementation of any plans to attack US interests.

Lebanon

Italian Embassy in Beirut Expects Attacks by LARF

The Embassy has adopted rigorous security measures in the face of a recent statement by individuals claiming to represent the Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Faction that the group considers every Italian citizen a target as Italy continues to detain two of its members. The group kidnaped a French diplomat on 25 March in an apparent attempt to exchange him for another LARF member being held in France, but released him unharmed on 2 April.

France

US Attaches Under Surveillance Again?

In Paris on 28 April, an unidentified male—described as 30 to 35 years of age with black hair, moustache, and swarthy complexion—was observed apparently watching the compound that houses personnel of the US Embassy's defense attache office.

Such surveillance could be the work of supporters of the Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Faction, whose members killed a US defense attache in Paris in January 1982.

Terrorists Could Target Paris Air Show

This biennial event, to be held at Le Bourget Airfield from 30 May to 9 June, provides an excellent opportunity for terrorists to gain publicity. While we have no specific indications that European terrorists are planning to stage an attack against the air show, the easy access to airport facilities and the large number of Americans expected to attend make the show a tempting target for a bombing. Four of the US participants—Boeing, Hughes, Lockheed, and Northrup—were mentioned as potential targets in documents recovered from West European terrorist groups involved in recent "anti-imperialist front" activities. b3

The Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Faction may also represent a threat. The group claimed responsibility for bombing the US pavilion at the Marseilles International Trade Fair on 29 September 1983, and an attack at the air show would embarrass France, which is holding a major LARF leader. b3

India

Sikh Bombing Campaign Leaves 85 Dead

A coordinated bombing campaign conducted by Sikh extremists during 10-12 May left 85 persons in Delhi and other cities dead and more than 150 wounded. More than a dozen bombs exploded in buses, bus stations, and other crowded areas; some of the unexploded devices found and defused were boobytrapped portable radios. This was the highest three-day death toll yet attributed to Sikh terrorism and the first coordinated bombing campaign since 37 train stations were bombed on 15 April 1984. These attacks came on the eve of the trial of three Sikhs accused of assassinating Prime Minister Indira Gandhi and prior to the 6 June anniversary of the storming of the Sikhs' Golden Temple by the Indian Army. Indian police have arrested 1,000 suspects so far and believe they have identified three persons responsible for the bombings. b3

Significant Developments

Belgium

CCC Resumes Bombing Campaign After Four-Month Lull

On 1 May the Belgian terrorist group Combatant Communist Cells (CCC) resumed its bombing campaign with an attack that caused the first fatalities attributable to the group. A bomb placed in a car outside the Employers' Federation of Belgium exploded and killed two firemen who had been trying to defuse it. Group members had distributed pamphlets at the scene warning of the bomb and phoned police 15 minutes prior to the explosion. In addition to the fatalities, several other aspects of this attack were new for the CCC—the distribution of leaflets at the scene, the warning call, and publication of a communique in both French and Dutch. b3

France

Three Bombs Claimed by "Action Directe"

In a series of attacks in Paris on the night of 13-14 April, a branch of Israel's Bank Leumi, the French National Immigration office, and the offices of Minute, a conservative French weekly newspaper, were extensively damaged. There were no casualties. Individuals purporting to represent Action Directe claimed responsibility, but there are doubts about their claims. b3

It appears these bombings may be the work of disgruntled North African immigrants rather than Action Directe. For example, the communique, written in very poor French, probably was the work of a nonnative French speaker. Except for some anti-Zionist phrases, the communique lacked the usual Action Directe rhetoric and made no mention of NATO. Instead, it attacked French treatment of North African immigrants and alleged anti-Algerian actions by President Mitterrand. b3

Arrested Turkish Terrorist Linked to Action Directe

On 24 April Muzaffer Kacar, a Turkish national, was arrested at a Paris radio station while carrying dynamite, detonators, and false Belgian identification papers. b1, b3

Terrorist Linked to Carlos Apparatus Expelled to West Germany

In keeping with the French policy of returning "undesirables" to their country of origin, urban guerrilla Magdalena Kopp was escorted to the West German border on 4 May. She had just completed serving a three-year sentence for transporting arms and explosives. Kopp was jailed with another suspected terrorist, Swiss national Bruno Breguet, whom the French are still holding on the same charge. Prior to their sentencing in 1982, the international terrorist Carlos claimed that the two belonged to his organization and warned he would strike in France if they were not released. A car bomb killed a woman and wounded more than 60 others on the day the two were imprisoned. b3

France-Spain

Setbacks for GAL

For the first time since the Antiterrorist Liberation Group (GAL) appeared in 1983, two of its members have been sentenced to jail terms. The men were arrested in September 1984, convicted of carrying weapons, and sentenced by a Bayonne court to five-year terms. In Paris, three other GAL members were arrested on 13 April and charged with the 30 March murder of a Spanish-Basque journalist. Judicial hearings on these three began in Bayonne on 17 April, while Spain has begun extradition proceedings. b3

Spain

Extradited ETA Members Released

On 19 April a Spanish criminal court released two of the three ETA terrorists extradited from France in September. The third was convicted and sentenced to 54 years in prison. b1, b3

The Spanish press is speculating that Madrid will not request further extraditions but will henceforth rely on French expulsions of alleged terrorists to third countries. The acquittals b1, b3 appear to be a setback to French-Spanish counterterrorist cooperation. We believe, however, that Paris may view them as proof of the fairness of the Spanish judicial system and, therefore, they could encourage additional extraditions. b3

ETA Bombs Hit Mediterranean Resorts

On 1 May ETA began a bombing campaign against Spanish resorts. So far 11 bombs have been detonated in the resort towns of Alicante, Javea, Villajoyosa, Demesa de Campoamor, Benidorm, Valencia, and Sidi San Juan. The bombs—timed for the start of the resort season—have caused no injuries and little damage. ETA has not attacked tourist targets since 1979. b3

Lebanon-United Kingdom

Wife of Kidnaped Journalist Receives Videotape

On 9 May, the wife of Alec Collett received a videotape of her husband from an anonymous source. Collett, a British journalist who works for the UN Relief and Works Agency for Palestinian refugees, was abducted south of Beirut on 25 March. The little-known Revolutionary Organization of Socialist Muslims (ROSM) claimed responsibility for the kidnaping. On the tape, Collett appeared healthy and said that he has been held in Beirut since the 25th and that he has been receiving medication for his diabetes. The tape contained no demands for his release. b3

~~Secret~~

The videotape marks the first time Collett's captors have been heard from since their 28 March statement claiming credit for the kidnaping. That statement threatened continued attacks against British targets until all Muslim "freedom fighters" were released from British jails. We suspect ROSM is a covername used by the Abu Nidal Group to claim credit for attacks against British targets. Members of the Abu Nidal Group are serving long sentences in the United Kingdom for the attempted assassination of the Israeli Ambassador to London in 1982. [REDACTED]

Argentina

Increase in Rightwing Violence

In Buenos Aires, the broadcasting facility of Radio Belgrano was wrecked on 29 April by three bombs planted by 10 men, three of whom were wearing police uniforms. Rightwing politicians have criticized the station for carrying "Marxist" commentaries on Argentine politics. In another incident, in the town of La Plata, 65 km south of Buenos Aires, kidnapers abducted a human rights activist on 27 April and carved swastikas on his body before releasing him. [REDACTED]

b3

This recent spate of rightwing violence coincides with the opening in late April of the trials of nine former Argentine military leaders—three of them ex-presidents—accused of human rights violations during the 1976-83 period of military rule. [REDACTED]

Iraq: Iranian Efforts
Weakening Shia Dissidents

Much of the terrorism attempted within Iraq or against Iraqi targets abroad can be attributed to Iranian-sponsored opposition groups. Although Iraqi security is effective in countering most attacks, these groups still manage to carry out bombings and assassinations from time to time.

Iran's efforts to cobble together an effective force of pliable Iraqi Shia dissident groups have left those groups more weakened and divided than ever. Iraqi Shias have largely resisted Tehran's attempts at domination but are split over ideological, leadership, and strategy issues. Even if a widely respected Iraqi Shia leader were to emerge, Iran probably would undermine his influence.

Dawa
Dawa (Islamic Call Party) probably is the oldest, largest, and most prestigious Iraqi Shia dissident group.

Rabitat Ahl al-Bayt

Rabitat Ahl al-Bayt (League of the Followers of the Prophet) is another Shia group that is reluctant to accept orders from Tehran. It brings together factions from SAIRI, Dawa, and other groups not resident in Iran.

~~Secret~~

The Iraqi Mujahidin (The Iraqi Strugglers)
The Mujahidin appears to be SAIRI's primary military wing. It was established in 1979 and is led by Abd al-Aziz al-Hakim, younger brother of SAIRI leader Muhammad al-Hakim.

b1, b3

The Islamic Action Organization

The Iranians also appear to have considerable control over the Islamic Action Organization (IAO). The group is also known as the Islamic Work Organization or Amal but is distinct from the terrorist Amal group in Lebanon. The IAO, an offshoot and rival of Dawa, is headed by Muhammad Taqi al-Modarasi, an Iranian who has close ties to Ayatollah Khomeini. The IAO has conducted terrorist operations inside and outside Iraq, but none is known to have been directed at US interests.

b1, b3

Prospects

Iraqi Shia dissidents face a dilemma. Without Iranian backing and a presence in Iran, independent groups would be too weak and too distant to build an effective movement inside Iraq. The acceptance of Iranian backing and control, however, antagonizes many Iraqi Shia leaders and taints the groups, in the eyes of Iraq's Arab Shias who hold a deep-rooted animosity against the Persians.

b3

The Iraqi Shia oppositionists appear divided along class and ethnic lines.

b1, b3

We see little chance of an effective Shia dissident movement emerging from the badly splintered rebels. The chasms between them appear too numerous and too wide to be easily bridged. The emergence of a native Iraqi Shia leader with widespread popular support among Iraq's Shias would improve the rebels' prospects, but Iran probably would view him as a challenge to its authority and undermine his influence.

Chronology of Terrorism—1985

Below are described noteworthy foreign and international terrorist events and counterterrorism developments that have occurred or come to light since our last issue. Events and developments that have already been described elsewhere in this publication are not included.

February

Turkey: Two police officers and one Dev Yol terrorist killed in shootout near Malatya. [REDACTED]

b3

b1
b3

April

Indonesia: Oilworkers in Iran Jaya kidnaped and released. Separatists of the Free Papua Movement abducted two Dutch and one Indonesian employee of Shell Oil and released them after the company paid an undisclosed ransom and provided the guerrillas with medical supplies. [REDACTED]

b3

8-9 April

Uganda: Five people killed for their ties to government. In two separate attacks, a woman and man affiliated with the Ugandan People's Congress party were hacked to death. A relative of one of the victims and two members of the family of a policeman were shot to death in apparently related incidents. [REDACTED]

b3

20 April

Belgium: New group claims bombing of North Atlantic Assembly in Brussels. A previously unknown Belgian group, the Revolutionary Front for Proletarian Action, claimed credit for detonating a 54-kilogram bomb that caused extensive damage to the Assembly offices and wounded two persons in a nearby apartment. [REDACTED]

b3

21 April

Belgium: FRAP claims second bombing in Brussels. The Revolutionary Front for Proletarian Action took credit for bombing the offices of the West German firm Telefunken. The explosion caused moderate damage but no injuries. [REDACTED]

b3

Namibia: Bomb blast in discotheque wounds five. The device, placed in the rear of the Oluno disco, exploded in the early evening when few people were in the building. [REDACTED]

b3

22 April

West Germany: Bomb damages offices of Siemens electronics firm in Duesseldorf. No group has yet claimed responsibility, but police suspect the Revolutionary Cells. [REDACTED]

b3

26 April

Northern Ireland: Police arrest seven Provisional IRA terrorists. The arrests followed the discovery of more than 1,500 kilograms of explosives on a farm near Belfast. [REDACTED]

b3

20 May 1985

b3

27 April

France: World Bank in Paris bombed by Action Directe. A car bomb, which exploded outside the building, wounded a night watchman and caused considerable damage. Action Directe bombed the same building on 6 June 1982. [REDACTED]

b3

Bangladesh: Political candidate shot to death by masked gunmen in Jhenaidah. He was seeking a seat in local council elections scheduled for 16 and 30 May. No group has claimed credit for the killing. [REDACTED]

b3

b1, b3

29 April

West Germany: Revolutionary Cells claim three bombings in Dusseldorf and Cologne. The attacks damaged a bank, a pharmaceutical firm, and a building housing the All-Metal Employers' Federation. [REDACTED]

b3

Lebanon: Unsuccessful attempt to kidnap French TV correspondent. Norbert Balit said his cries for help drove off the five gunmen, who stole his car. [REDACTED]

b3

29-30 April

France: Two defense-related telecommunications firms bombed in Paris. The explosions wounded a night watchman and caused considerable property damage. In claiming responsibility, Action Directe alleged that the companies were producing equipment for NATO cruise missiles. [REDACTED]

b3

30 April

Egypt: Defendants in Bakkush affair handed over to their own governments. Egypt requested that the four—two Maltese and two Britons—be prosecuted in their respective countries. The November 1984 plan to kill former Libyan Prime Minister Bakkush was exposed after the four suspects were apprehended and Libyan leader Qadhafi was tricked into believing his plan had succeeded. [REDACTED]

b3

Ecuador: Four AVC members escape through tunnel from Garcia Moreno Prison in Quito. The most important prisoner was Hamet Vasconez, believed to be the number-two man in the Alfaro Vive, Carajo! organization. The other three had been arrested during attempted bank robberies in Quito in June 1984. [REDACTED]

b3

Peru: Sendero Luminoso terrorists hurl dynamite sticks at public buildings. One of the blasts caused severe damage but no deaths at the National Stadium, where government officials were counting votes from the 14 April national election. [REDACTED]

b3

Peru: Three women found dead in Huanta Province. The bodies had been mutilated by wild dogs, and one had a sign on her chest saying, "This is how the . . . collaborators die." Although no group claimed responsibility, the leftist terrorist group Sendero Luminoso, which has conducted similar slayings in the province, is suspected. [REDACTED]

~~Secret~~

South Africa: ANC bombs two mining companies and a bank. The early-morning blasts, which caused extensive property damage but no casualties, probably were meant to show ANC solidarity with striking mineworkers. [REDACTED]

b1, b3

2 May

Spain: US firm bombed in Bilbao. The attack on the Norton Company caused minor damage but no injuries. No group has claimed responsibility. [REDACTED]

b1, b3

Spain: ETA blows up three French automobiles on Spanish train. The vehicles were aboard a railway car at the Beasain station. [REDACTED]

b3

Lebanon: Amal official Jamal Zaydan killed by bomb in his car. No group has yet claimed credit for the attack. [REDACTED]

b3

Chile: Seven power pylons destroyed by bombs near Santiago. The attack occurred just before President Pinochet spoke to the nation in a radio and television address. [REDACTED]

b3

El Salvador: Unknown terrorists kill mayor of San Jorge. Edgar Mauricio Valenzuela, a Christian Democrat, had been kidnaped several days before his 1 May installation. He was released, but his captors warned him not to assume office. When he ignored the threats, he was shot to death. [REDACTED]

b3

3 May

West Germany: New group bombs French firm in Cologne. The French telecommunications company provides computer maintenance for the German Army. A previously unknown group, the Commando Proletarian Action, claimed credit for the attack. [REDACTED]

b1, b3

~~Secret~~

~~Secret~~

West Germany: Large bomb defused at Federal Office for Military Procurement in Koblenz. Police suspect the Red Army Faction or members of its periphery were responsible. b3

Spain: ETA bombs explode at Hertz and Avis offices in San Sebastian and Ford showroom in Vitoria. The bombings caused minor damage and probably were intended to protest President Reagan's visit to Spain. b3

Israel: Bomb defused at train station in Rosh Ha'ayin. A railroadworker discovered the device under a bench. No group has claimed credit. b3

5 May

Corsica: Thirty bombs explode in Ajaccio area. A variety of businesses and private residences owned by mainland French citizens were struck, causing extensive property damage. Two policemen were slightly wounded while defusing one of the bombs. No one claimed responsibility, but the attacks probably are the work of Corsican separatists. b3

6 May

Belgium: CCC claims bomb blast at gendarmerie administrative offices in Brussels. In a communique, the Combatant Communist Cells (CCC) had blamed the police for the deaths of two firemen in a 1 May bombing. b3

7 May

Spain: Car bomb seriously wounds policeman in Pamplona. No group has claimed responsibility, but ETA is suspected. b3

Japan: Homemade rockets hit Narita Airport, wound officeworker. Rockets landed near the air traffic control center, a private security company's offices, and a radar installation, causing minor damage and brush fires. The leftist terrorist group Chukaku-ha (Nucleus Faction) is believed responsible for this attack as well as for two similar ones in April. b3

8 May

Portugal: Radio Free Europe station near Lisbon bombed. A previously unknown group, the Anti-Capitalist and Anti-Militarist Group, claimed credit for the attack to protest Portuguese "dependence" on the United States. b3

Lebanon: Israeli patrol boat sinks rubber raft off Tyre, killing five Palestinians. The raft was apparently heading for the Israeli coast when it was intercepted. An Israeli newspaper claims that Fatah has accepted responsibility for this operation and other recent seaborne attempts. b3

Singapore: Two arrested for smuggling arms to Tamil insurgents. Two Singaporean citizens are in custody, and a container of rifles, Sten guns, ammunition, and explosives was seized. Sri Lankan officials claim the shipment was intended for the separatist guerrilla group PLOTE. b3
